The CIA and the Treasury

The CIA is Uncle's super-spy agency with a direct pipe-line to the U. S. Treasury.

Senator Eugene McCarthy began talking about an investigation of both the FBI and the CIA about a year ago. Most members of congress seem quite reluctant about tackling this assignment, leaving McCarthy with altogether too little backing to take on this mountain of power.

This past summer McCarthy has been hospitalized under doctor's care a considerable part of the time.

I think we should have a committee made up of 10 U. S. senators and members of the house of representatives with power superceding that of either organization. This power should not only be confined to investigations but should be directive as well.

The article by the editor of the Dispatch, Nov. 1, is both timely and right to the point.
